UNITED STATES SENATORS

Should Be Elected By the People, and Thus Lighten the Burden of Taxation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 19, 1890.
The senatorial race at Frankfort, Ky., has not only been of unusual interest to every Kentuckian, but has excited the most wide-spread attention throughout the entire country. It has occupied the entire time of the legislature, and at last adjourned without any election at all. Thus the whole session of our legislature was frittered away in an attempt to elect a United States senator. And because of this nothing was accomplished for the state in the way of much-needed legislation. The taxpayer is burdened with the cost of this legislation which he did not call for, and the result is a loss to the state.

And in addition to this the legislature has been converted into a kind of arena for politicians to fight out their personal enmities and to get each other out of political debt by getting or refusing to support some schemer, aspirant, or in maintaining a deadlock. In this thinking state has not earthly power to end the continual tumult and riot of the session, members and senators were marched into the state house along the gauntlet between the bayonets of 500 militia, called out by the governor, I suppose to suppress the legislature or something else. What a finale! A speech or two, and we shudder at the thought of it, and truly feel its严肃ness.

We can not but deplore the fact that such condition existed which caused the governor to call out troops under pretense of protecting human life, especially when the governor was warranted in his action is a question which I am in no way discussing however, and on this point we shall not say anything. Nor do I mean to reflect any way upon any candidate for United States senator who was before that body, nor upon any individual member of it. I have no desire to do that. It was one of those very close contests, bitterly fought on all sides, and it was perhaps an impossibility to prevent anything that occurred, when the governor was warranted in his action.

The most remarkable legislative session in the history of Kentucky adjourned Tuesday night at 6 o'clock, and adjourned without electing a United States senator and without passing any needed financial legislation. Of course, the remarkable feature of the session has been the continual fight.

At the November meeting of Democrats, 68 Republicans and two Populists were elected to the legislature. The Democrats nominated J. C. S. Blackburn as their candidate and D. W. Godfrey Hunter as their runner-up. One Populist voted for Blackburn, the other voted for Hunter, the other two were unattached.

The nominations were made before the time for the first joint ballot, and before that time arrived Isaac Wilson, a Democratic representative, died, thus breaking the tie. The election of Wilson's successor was postponed some days longer than was customary in such cases, the reason being that the House being in session and wanting to give time to elect Hunter before a Democrat could be returned in Wilson's place.

The scheme did not work, for Senator Steige, a Republican who was opposed to Hunter anyhow, signed a pledge not to vote for Hunter till Wilson's successor was selected. Wilson's successor, the other two, and elected him. The second money Democrats who declined to go into caucus issued an address stating their reasons for not supporting Blackburn.

The nominations were made before the time for the first joint ballot, and whenever I see any great assembly anywhere in this nation, I find the statesmen of old Kentucky among those of the front. And if I desire a true friend, I know of no better place to find him in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky. But this aside. How are we to avoid the same mistake we encountered in the United States senatorial election?

I answer emphatically, let them be elected by the direct ballot of the people. This, in my humble judgment, is the remedy and the only one. It would in no sense violate the spirit of the constitution that United States senators shall represent the state. But it would surely give the people a certain degree of satisfaction, and even if it may be spent in trying to elect a senator. It is time that economy should prevail in government. It is time for the burden of taxation which has been bearing down upon the back of the toiler and farmer to be lifted and lightened, and it should be done quickly. There are many points of view, but, in practical change, and every system tending to this end should be adopted. There are potent reasons why the constitution should be amended so that senators can be elected by the people.

To sum up only a few of the more important ones, however, I would say that:

First. It would give us a certain election of a United States senator, thereby saving the unnecessary expense which follows when no result is reached, as was the case with the last senatorial contest.

Second. It would give us the man who was most interested in the choice of the majority of the voters. This is the present law is not always the case.

The people can not possibly tell who may be chosen by the method of the legislature where partisan bitterness, personal enmities, etc., may prevail in the election of one whom the people themselves would never choose, and who may be entirely unfit for the place.

Third. It would enable us to select our state legislature solely upon the individual merit and fitness of each, where now they are entirely chosen entirely upon the question of who they will or will not support for United States senator.

Fourth. The legislature would then be able to devote its entire time for the good of the state, making laws which are needed, and abolishing and amending those which are bad and unjust.

There are many other reasons which could be said in favor of this change, but I have now taken up more of your valuable space than I intended, so will not add more. I believe that this sentiment will grow as the people consider it, and that the dawn of the 20th century will see the adoption of the manner of choosing our United States senators.

With best regards to friends and kindest wishes for you and yours, I am, Yours truly, HENRY L. GOSSEY.

IN A NUTSHELL.

History of the Senatorial Contest From the Start To the Finish.

The Cincinnati Enquirer correspondent at Frankfort thus tersely summarizes the work of the late unlamented General Assembly, which adjourned last week after holding the most disgraceful session in the history of the state, in the election of a United States senator:

The most remarkable legislative session in the history of Kentucky adjourned Tuesday night at 6 o'clock, and adjourned without electing a United States senator and without passing any needed financial legislation. Of course, the remarkable feature of the session has been the continual fight.

At the November meeting of Democrats, 68 Republicans and two Populists were elected to the legislature. The Democrats nominated J. C. S. Blackburn as their candidate and D. W. Godfrey Hunter as their runner-up. One Populist voted for Blackburn, the other two were unattached.

The nominations were made before the time for the first joint ballot, and before that time arrived Isaac Wilson, a Democratic representative, died, thus breaking the tie. The election of Wilson's successor was postponed some days longer than was customary in such cases, the reason being that the House being in session and wanting to give time to elect Hunter before a Democrat could be returned in Wilson's place.

The scheme did not work, for Senator Steige, a Republican who was opposed to Hunter anyhow, signed a pledge not to vote for Hunter till Wilson's successor was selected. Wilson's successor, the other two, and elected him. The second money Democrats who declined to go into caucus issued an address stating their reasons for not supporting Blackburn.

Later all but five of them came over and supported Blackburn, and at any time after Wilson's successor took his seat Blackburn could have been elected had they voted for him.

After many days of balking it was discovered that Hunter, the Republican nominee, had pledged himself in writing to support the free coinage of silver. He was virtually requested to withdraw and do so. Then followed the Republican infamy, for they finally voted for Blackburn.

The five sound money Democrats still held out and refused to vote for Blackburn because, they said, he could not be elected even if they voted for him.

On Saturday, March 7, Senator Steige, one of these five, was sick, and he did not vote. On this day the Populists voted for Blackburn, and he could have been elected in two minutes if the sound money Democrats had not violated their oft-repeated promise to vote for Blackburn whenever both Populists did. Speight, one of the gold-standard men, did come over, but Carlisle, Vinton and Wilkins broke the faith and stood against Blackburn.

On Monday Senator Washington died, and then the Republicans thought sure they would elect Boyle. The Republican House began at once by unseating Kaufman, a Democrat, but in five minutes thereafter the Democratic Senate unseated James and Walton, two Republicans. Before Kaufman was unseated his opponent, Duray, withdrew from the contest, but the House took up the case, in spite of the withdrawal, and unseated Kaufman.

Then Duray declined to qualify, and thus defeated the plan of the party leaders. The calling out of the troops and other measures had been had three days to meet this emergency. Be- ginning with a withdrawal of the Republicans and an attempt to get the Democratic nominees to withdraw, it ended with the Governor calling out the militia, and will stand as one of the most remarkable politicalights of the year.

First. It would give us a certain election of a United States senator, thereby saving the unnecessary expense which follows when no result is reached, as was the case with the last senatorial contest.

BLACKBURN'S SUCCESSOR.

Governor Bradley Has No Power to Appoint One.

There appears to have been some talk to the effect that Governor Bradley, of Kentucky, in view of the failure of the legislature to elect a successor to Senator Blackburn, will appoint his successor after the 4th of March next, when Mr. Blackburn's term expires. Should this be true? There is no power of appointment signed by Governor Bradley, and he would be bound to accept it. Such a certificate to absent in the United States Senate would not be worth the paper it was written on. Governor Bradley, before taking such a step, would doubtless consult the leaders of his party, and would then find that he is utterly without power to do so. There is no power of appointment which is the sole authority to dispose of all questions involving a seat in that body, in the case of Senator Mantle, decided that the governor could not, under circumstances identical with those in Kentucky, make an appointment. Such a certificate would be of no value to the state, but, on the other hand, would be of great value to the state.

Each of these states endeavored to elect a senator, but, owing to factual reasons, no one was able to command a majority of the votes. Each legislature expired by limitation, and each governor appointed an appointment. For two years there was but one senator from each of the states of Washington, Montana and Wyoming. Then, in each of these states the legislature failed to elect a senator, and the power of appointment remained to the governor. The circumstances leading to this result were made on file in the office of the secretary of state.

The secretary has this principle established that should Governor Bradley refuse to admit the appointee upon the formal report of the committee on privileges and elections and probably without cause.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore it requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They sell one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. FOND OF FIGHTING DUELS.

Strange Instincts of a Young Man Who Lived in Mississippi.

Catchings, of Mississippi, was telling the other day of some of the early dueling in Mississippi. He told a story of the experience of a young man who went to Vicksburg from somewhere east, New England or Pennsylvania, some time before the war. His name was Robbin. He was a tall, good-looking man, young, and a quiet, gentlemanly manner, not used to southern ways, but disposed to let people alone. He came there to be cashier of one of the principal banks, a position which carried with it a good social standing.

In spite of the times it was determined by the men of the church with which he might be expected to associate to make a test of his mettle. They began by one of their number picking a quarrel with him. He avoided the quarrel, and did not set its purpose. One after another tried to get him embroiled without success.

Then they began to put indignities upon him and to insult him. His only mode of resentment was to say that they were blackguards and that he would have nothing to do with them. In a short time they had him ostracized. He thought he was ostracized.

He seemed to be entirely unconscious of any loss of dignity or standing in the community and to look upon his isolation as simply his own voluntary retirement from what he considered his company. Meanwhile he had become an object of contempt among the citizens, and finally it began to reflect upon the bank.

One day, after some particularly gross insult had been passed over by him with the accustomed silent contempt, the president of the bank took him aside and explained the situation, adding that he must regain public respect or he would have to sever his connection with the bank. Robbin asked what was expected of him, and it was explained that he would have to challenge one of the offenders to fight a duel.

"Oh," he said, "I can do that if I like."

He was immediately a challenge to the man who had done an indignity upon him. This man was one who had fought before, and was regarded as a most accomplished duelist. He promptly accepted the challenge; they fought with pistols, and both were dangerously wounded.

As soon as Robbin got well he took up his tormentors in order, challenging them systematically and deliberately. He fought eight or ten duels, killing some and wounding others of his antagonists.

The ostracism was declared off and he was made a hero. He prospered, became wealthy and prominent, and had a reputation as the most dangerous duelist in the state. He finally devoted himself to the code. Right and left, for little provocation or for none, he challenged men and fought them. It became his chief pleasure in life.

He built a massive stone castle on the heights overlooking Vicksburg, which cost an immense amount of money, and was known as "Robbin's Castle." In this he had a long room fitted up as a library and armory. Here he had all sorts of weapons which might be used in dueling. Hung about the walls were broadswords, foils, pistols, etc., each looking like a masterpiece that they had been made in. The spirit-like Yankee had become a terror. No one dared to offend him. He was just looking around for some one to fight.

His extravagance finally brought financial reverses upon him. Suit was going to be brought against him in the courts for a large sum of money owed by him to some parties outside of the state. When he was notified of it he wrote a note to each one of the members of the Vicksburg bar, notifying them that any lawyer who took the case would have to fight a duel.

But one lawyer could be found willing to take the case. He was promptly chosen by Robbin. They fought, and both were severely wounded, so that they were confined to their beds for months.

Then it was discovered that Robbin was insane. When forced into the first duel the sight of his fallen antagonist had unbalanced his mind and made a maniac of him. Sane on all other subjects, he had become entirely irresponsible on this, and his course had been simply that of a dueling maniac. He ended his days in an asylum. —Philadelphia Telegraph.

MCKINLEY'S BEST THINGS."

Carter White, the Major Penitentiary Guards.

McKinley's personal organ in this city is in the longest style "some of the best things" that have ever been seen at the banquet of the Marquis Club Wednesday night. We know that they were his "best things" because his personal organ says so, which is equivalent to saying that he says so himself.

One of the "best things" was this:

"The whole world knew a year ago and of its utterance what the republican platform of 1860 would be and the whole world knows now, and has known for a year past, what the republican platform of 1896 will be. Then the battle was to arrest the spread of slave labor in America; now it is to prevent importation of paid and degraded free labor in America."

This serves to call attention to the difference between the republican party of 1860 and the republican party of 1896—a difference which William McKinley seems to be quite incapable of perceiving. In 1860 the republican party stood for freedom; in 1896 it is opposed to freedom, and its leaders and heroes do not hesitate to say so. In 1860 the republican party is substantially what the whig party was before it gave up the ghost in 1852.

Until after its defeat that year the whig party was the party of high tariff, and its protection was created by taxation and by enacting the people engaged in certain industries out of the earnings of people engaged in other industries. The democratic tariff of 1846 had exposed the falsity of that doctrine and in 1852 the people refused to be humbugged by it any longer and gave the whig party its quietus.

In its place arose the republican party, which professed to be the party of freedom, and did not profess to be the party of the tariff made of slavery. Some of its representatives in congress in 1857 represented as members of a free-trade party in favor of abolishing the whole tariff system and raising revenue by direct taxation.

This party has ceased to be the party of freedom. It is the party of slavery. What is slavery? It is involuntary servitude. That is what a protective tariff extracts from the mass of people. What is a slave? It is one who toils while another enjoys the fruit of his toil.

He is forced to pay out of his earnings $50 or 100 percent, more for an article than its value as determined by free competition as is truly shown in a newspaper a few days in a Georgia cotton field.

He is compelled to render services to the man who is making him pay by law to exact from him for the clothing he wears from 50 to 100 percent more than it is worth. The fact may be concealed from him by the devilish ingenuity of his master, but it is none the less a fact.

Another of McKinley's "best things" was this: "The republican party would as soon think of lowering the flag of our country as to contemplate with patience and without protest and opposition any attempt to degrade or impair the medium of exchange among the people. It can be relied upon in the future, as in the past, to supply the country with the best money ever known, gold, silver and paper, good the world over."

"In the future as in the past" is particularly good. It serves to recall the fact that the republican party supplied the country with greenbacks in 1862 and the years following—a currency which drove out every dollar of specie and became so "degraded" and "corrupted" at one time that it was worth less than 40 cents on the dollar.

And this same currency corrupted the thinking of the country; even that of the supreme court of the United States.

An incident of flat lunacy in place of sound money history.

It serves also to recall the fact that in 1878 the republican party forced the "endless chain" which for three years had been biting gold out of the treasury—forced it by enacting that re-deemed greenbacks must not stay redeemed and by enacting in another statute that Uncle Sam should help out the poor bantams by buying and coining their silver. It reminds us that the republicans of the McKinley campaign is the logical candidate of the monopoly party. And he is just the sort of a candidate that the democratic party would be pleased to meet.—Chicago Chronicle.

—Kingsley looks like a Napoleon, Calton like Lincoln, Reed like Hung Chang, "Cushy" Davis like Mrs. Butler, and Morton—well, he doesn't look more than 72, and according to his own showing, he isn't 100.—N. Y. Mercury.

—It is said that the republicans will trot out ten favorite sons at St. Louis. But the big four sit serene, apart and alone. The supporters of Morton, Reed, Allison and McKinley mean business, not compliments.—N. Y. Sun.

—If the necessity exists for taxing wool in the interests of the republican campaign, the same necessity exists for the mining camp despots and passed a law which, by the admission of their own leaders, brought on the panic of 1893 just as the McKinley policy brought on the panic of 1873.

So McKinley's very best things serve to impress upon us the fact that the republican party is no longer the party of freedom, whatever it may have been in the past, and that its policy with respect to the currency has always been, even save only when it made provision for the resumption of specie payments in 1875. Even then it did a vast amount of mischief by postponing resumption for four years and providing that redemption should not redeem.—Philadelphia Record.

—The manufacturers are going on with their manufacturing and are selling more goods to outsiders than they ever did before. They would not object to more tariff and more import, but they are doing very well with the present average duty of 42 per cent. The lobbies at Washington are not as full of tariff fixers as usual this winter, and we imagine that there will be more difficulty in "frying the fat" out of the protected interests than was experienced in the campaign of 1892. Things are different now.—Philadelphia Record.

KILL THE DINGLEY BILL.

A Measure That Would Diminish Revenue.

The best thing that the houses of representatives can do with the free-silver substitute bill is to send it back to the Senate, where it will have a remarkable effect upon the tides along neighboring coasts. When a tempest is approaching, or passing over the ocean, the tides are noticeably higher than usual, as if the water had been driven in a vast wave before the storm. The influence extends to a greater distance than the cyclonic storm center, so that the tides are affected by foretelling the approach of a dangerous hurricane by means of indications furnished by tides gages situated far away from the place then occupied by the whirling winds. The fact that the tidal wave outruns the advancing storm shows how extremely sensitive the surface of the sea is to the changes of pressure brought to bear upon it by the never-resting atmosphere.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

There is an intense rivalry between the watermelon and tomato growers as to who can produce the largest and best in 1895.

The customs receipts for January this year were $16,336,795, from internal revenue, $11,041,401, and from miscellaneous sources $11,517,425, making a total for the month of $39,237,620. This is greatly in excess of $1,000,000 a day for the 29 business days in January. It is also $1,000,000 more than the average receipts of the previous six months. The January figures are far more likely to be exceeded in the succeeding months of the fiscal year, because the bulk of the sugar imports are made in the first half of the year, and also because the imports of tobacco are just beginning to produce what was expected of them. There is every reason to believe that the total receipts for the present fiscal year will exceed $300,000,000, against $376,000,000 last year. This would bring the deficiency on the 30th day of next June within $15,260,000 or $16,600,000, against $12,000,000 last year, and against $70,000,000 in 1894, the last year of the McKinley law. This is a pretty regular improvement. It keeps up with the business conditions. Revenues increase as with all its faults the Wilson bill is in a general sense framed to fit the requirements of the country.

Next year the republicans will surely except the expenditures, and in the succeeding years there will be an ever-increasing amount of revenue sufficient to provide for the payment of the government obligations. This will be accomplished under the operation of the Wilson tariff, for no matter what the result of the election may be next fall, no party that will be in power in Washington will dare to change the Wilson bill in any material way. The principle of low taxes is fully established, and no party will be found in the future of the present generation to advocate or defend the imposition of high taxes for favorites, either on the pretense that it will benefit the people or that it is necessary for the representations of the government in time of peace.—Utah (N. Y.) Observer.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

New Tide Predictions.

Fresh information derived from the fact that West Indian hurricanes, and other great storms at sea, frequently produce a remarkable effect upon the tides along neighboring coasts. THE SECOND COMING.

into Christ Shall the People Gather When trouble Meets Them.

ough the World's False or Sympathy lets Shut, Christ's Mercy is Never Revoked in Vain—Sermon by Rev.
Dr. De Witt Talmage, D. D.

Dr. Talmage took as his text Sunday Genes. xix, 10: "Unto me take the gathering of the people be."

The author, a supernatural lens, or what he might call a spiritual eye, dyed Jacob's rod down through the centuries until he sees Christ the center of all popular attraction and the greatest being in all the world, so everywhere acknowledged.
It was not always so. The world tried hard to put him down and to put him out. In the year 1200, while excavating for antiquities 53 miles northeast of Rome, a copper plate tablet was found containing the death warrant of the Lord Jesus Christ, reading in this wise:

"In the year 17 of the empire of Tiberius Caesar, and on the 25th of March, I, Pontius Pilate, governor of the Prae-tor, condemn Jesus of Nazareth to die between two thieves, Quintius Cornelius to lead him forth to the place of execution."

The death warrant was signed by several names. First, by Daniel, rabbi Pharisee; secondly, by Johannes, rabbi; thirdly, by Raphshel, fourthly, by Capet, a private citizen. The capital punishment was executed according to law. The name of the thief crucified on the right-hand side of Jesus was Dismas. The name of the thief crucified on the left-hand side of Jesus Christ was Gestus. Pontius Pilate, deriving the tragic name of the world lighted candles from noon until night. Thirty-five years of maltreatment. They sacrifice his birth to baste him and his death to excruciation. A all of the city, but about those timbrel and recently exposed by archaeologists, shows a carcature of Jesus Christ, evidencing the contempt in which He was held by many of the people. The wall was decorated with a cross and a donkey nailed to it, and under it the inscription: "This is the Christ whom the people worship." But I rejoice that that day is gone by. Our Christ is coming out from under the world's abuse.

The most popular name on earth to-day is the name of Christ. Where He had one friend Christ has a thousand friends. The society we have come into is the society of the 2000 celebrated infidels in Great Britain in our day 16 have come back to Christ trying to undo the blatant mischiefs of their lives—out of the 20. Every man who writes a letter or signs a document, wittingly or unwittingly, honors Jesus Christ. We date everything as B. C. or A. D.
A. D. C. before Christ; A. D. D.
After Domini, in the year of our Lord.

All the world is gathered around the upright beam of the Cross of the Son of God. B. C. A. D. I do not care what you call Him—whether Conqueror or King, or Morning Star, or Sun of Righteousness, or Balm of Gilead, or Lebanon Cedar, or Brother, or Friend, or take the name used in the verse from which I take my text, and call Him Shiloh, which means His Son, Translators or the Peacemaker.
Shiloh, I only want to tell you that "unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." In the first place, the people are gathered around Christ for pardon. No sensible man is healthfully ambitious man is satisfied with his past life. A fool may think he is all right. A sensible man knows he is not. I do not care what the theories may be that he has in his mind before he before God and man gives him no essential satisfaction. "Oh," he says, "there have been so many things I have done! I ought not to have done, there have been so many things I have said! I ought never to have said, there have been so many things I have written! I ought never to have written, there have been so many things I have thought! I ought never to have thought, I must sooner or later the past reconstructed; there are days and months and years which cry out against me in horrible vociferation." Ah! my brother, Christ adjusts the past by obliterating it. He does not erase the record of our mis-doing with a dash of ink from a register's pen, but lifting his right hand, crushed, red at the palm, He pointed it against His pierced side, and with the words of the agonist of all, those wounds He rubs out the accusatory chapter. He blots out our in-iquities. Oh! never be anxious about the future; better be anxious about the past. I put it not at the end of my sermon; I put it at the front: Mercy and pardon through Shiloh, the sin pardoning Christ. "Unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." "Oh!" says someone, "I have for 40 years been as bad as I could be, and is there any mercy for me?" Mercy for you. "Oh!" says some one here, "had a grand ancestry, the holiest of fathers and the tenderest of mothers, and for my peridy there is no excuse. Do you think there is any mercy for me?" Mercy for you. "I have committed what you call the unpardonable sin, and the Bible says if a man commits that sin, he is neither to be forgiven in this world nor the world to come. Do you think there is any mercy for me?" The fact that you have any solicitude about the matter at all proves positively that you have not committed any unpardonable sin. Mercy for you?

Oh! the grace of God which bringeth salvation.

The grace of God, let us take the surveyor's chain and try to make God's mercy through Jesus Christ; let one surveyor take that chain and go to the north, and another surveyor take that chain and go to the south, and another surveyor take that chain and go to the east, and another surveyor take that chain and go to the west, and then they will cover up of the square miles of that vast kingdom of God's mercy.
Aye! you will have to go to the four quarters of the earth to make room for the report of that measurement. It can not be measured. Paul tried to climb the height of it, and he went height over height, altitude above altitude, mountain above mountain, then sank down in discouragement and gave it up, for he saw Sierra Nevadas beyond and Matterhorn beyond, and he said, "I will go back to the plains, he says: "I am finding out, that in all things He might have the pre-eminence.
You notice that nearly all the sinners mentioned as pardoned in the Bible were great sinners—David a great sinner, Paul a great sinner, Rahab a great sinner, Magdalene a great sinner, the woman a great sinner, the thief on the cross a great sinner. The world will be gathered around the gathering of the people gathered around Christ.

But, I remark again, the people will gather around Christ as a sympathizer.
They want sympathy. I hear people talk as though they were independent of it. None of us could live without sympathy. When parts of the family are separated, how long the house seems until they get home!
But also, for those who never come home. Sometimes it seems as if it must be impossible.
What will the world never again see over the threshold? Will they never again sit with us at the table? Will they never again kneel with us at family prayer? Shall we never again look into their sunny faces?
Shall we never again on earth take counsel with them for our work? Alas!
me, who can stand under these griefs?
O Christ, Thou canst do more for a bereft soul than any one else. It is He who sends us to the tomb to tell of His resurrection. It is He that comes to us and breathes into us the spirit of submission until we look up from the wreck and ruin of our brightest expectations and say: "Father, not my will, but Thine, be done." Oh, ye who are bereft! ye anguish-bitten, come into this refuge. The roll of those who came for relief, Christ larger and larger. Up to this Shiloh of universal sympathy the gathering of the people shall be. Oh, that Christ would stand by all these empty cri-dles, and all these desolate homessteads, and all these broken hearts, and persuade us it is well.

The world can not offer you any help at such a time. Suppose the world comes and offers you money, you are not likely to take it. You call on your departed loved ones with you than in palatial surroundings and they away. Suppose the world offers you its honors to console you. What is the presidency to Abraham Lincoln, when little Willy lies dead in the white house? Perhaps the world comes and says: "Time will surely come when we will be repaid you." And so hundreds have been comforted, thousands have been confirmed, millions have been confirmed, and Christ had done the work.
Oh, what you want sympathy. The world's heart of sympathy beats very irregularly. Plenty of sympathy when we do not want it, and often when we are in appealing cases of sympathy. There are multitudes of people for sympathy—sympathy in their work, sympathy in their fatigues, sympathy in their bereavements, sympathy in their physical ailments, sympathy in their spiritual anxieties, sympathy in their time of declining years, sympathy in the Japanese broken off from China. By a convolution of the earth, deep, high, everlasting, slightly sympathy. We must have it, and God gives it. That is the chord with which the world is going to draw all nations to Him.

At the story of punishment a man's eyes flashe and his teeth set and his fit clinches, and he prepares to do battle even though it be against the heavens; yet what heart hard but it will succumb to the story of combat.
Even a man who is not pleased and not in a hour of weakness, when he has been born again, can be a brave man stand beside us and promise to see us through, what courage it gives to our heart, and what strength it gives to our arm. Still mightier is a woman's sympathy. Let him tell her story who when his fortunes were gone and all the world were against him, came to me and found in that house wife who could write on the top of the simple flour barrel. "The Lord will provide" or write on the door of the empty wardrobe. "Consider the lilies of the field; if God so clothed the grass of the field, will He not clothe us and us and ours?" Or let that young man tell the story who has gone the whole round of dissipation. The shadow of the "penitentary" is upon him, and even his face says: "Be off; never come home again." The young man finds still his mother's arm outstretched for him, at now she will stand at the wicket of the prison to whisper consolation; get down on her knees before the master, begging for pardon, hoping on her wayward son to tell the story which is full of parental restraint, and impatience of parental restraint, has wandered off from a home, of which she is off, into the murky and thunderous midnight of abandonment, awed from God, and further away, until some time she is lost on the beach of that same home as a tiny spinder of a week. Who will wash off the blood from the gashed forehead? Who will fill her of that Christ who came to save the lost?

Who will out that wavy head upon the clear white pillow and watch by day and watch by night until the voice of the sufferer becomes the whisper, and the whisper becomes only a faint vibration of the lips and the faint motion of the head. Who will be a silent look, and his feet are still, and the frenzied heart is still, and all is still? Who will have compassion on her when no others have compassion?
Mother! Mother!

Oh, there is something beautiful in sympathy—in many sympathy, widely spread, motherly sympathy; yes, and neighborly sympathy. Why is it that a city was aroused with excitement when a little child was kidnapped from one of the streets? Why were whole columns of the newspapers filled with the story of a little child? It was because we are all one in sympathy, and every parent said: "How if it had been my child? How if it had been my child?" Who will be a silent look, and his feet are still, and
the frenzied heart is still, and all is still? Who will have compassion on her when no others have compassion?

THURSDAY... March 26, 1893.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We are authorized to announce CHARLES T. BYRD, of Cincinnati, a candidate for the office of Circuit Court Clerk for Wolfe county, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

LACONIC LIVE NEWS.

Some of the Republican bosses are becoming scared because McKinley is securing too many delegates to the St. Louis convention.

The national house of representatives has passed resolutions censuring Hon. Thos. F. Bayard for an utterance delivered in an address at Edinburg, Scotland.

SENATOR PEPPER must have become a victim of the drink habit, or he never would have said that the Democratic presidential ticket would not carry more than one southern state.

This shows the way the wind is blowing. Out of the 206 delegates already chosen to the St. Louis convention, 103 favor McKinley; 32 are for Allison, 22 for Seward, 18 for Bryan, 10 for Morton, and 10 for Gurnon.

The so-called millionaire, Dr. Arthur Destrout, who was convicted at Union, Mo., for killing his wife and baby in St. Louis, was brought before court and sentenced to be hanged April 22. He was taken back to the St. Louis jail for safe-keeping.

The dead body of a boy baby was mailed in the postoffice at Washington, D. C., last week. It weighed 9 ounces and was 6 inches from the crown of its head to the soles of its feet. There being no provisions in the postal regulations for the transmission of such matter, it was stopped in transit.

It is thought that the head of Pearl Bryan, who was so foully murdered near Newport, Ky., has been found. A stranger brought a head to a Columbus (O.) manufacturer of human skeletons, and he suspecting it to be the missing member, notified the authorities. Steps are being taken for its identification.

The senate committee on privileges and elections has ordered a favorable report on Senator Temple's proposed amendment to the constitution, providing for the election of United States senators by popular vote. The example of the Kentucky legislature is in itself conclusive argument in favor of such a law.—Big Sandy News.

ADOLPH HERMANN of Brownstown, Ind., has a rare curiosity in the shape of an old violin. It was constructed in the sixteenth century. It contains an inscription in Latin, which, translated by Prof. L. N. Fouts, conveys the intelligence that it was presented by a maker to his son in the year 1575. The instrument bears all the marks of an old make, and is therefore fine.

too many dictators nowadays, too many men who want the people to conform to their own peculiar views, regardless of personal considerations, but who would not budge an inch to accommodate an opposing faction. Too many cooks spoil the broth. Too many bosses ruin politics. It is time for conservative and conciliatory heads to predominate, and nothing but liberal and sensible politics will prevail.

The county commissioners of Madison county, Indiana, have adopted a novel means of getting rid of an objectionable officer. Notices have been posted to all local merchants not to sell any provisions to Superintendent Kenyon of the poor farm, as the bills would not be allowed by them. In other words, the commissioners are going to starve out the superintendent as well as the inmates of the poorhouse, because Kenyon, who has one year more to serve, will not resign. The case will be settled in the courts.

The people of Kentucky have just been given the first lesson in Republican rule in the state. Military rule and despotism go hand in hand. The bayonet is the power called into service by a Republican governor to aid in the election of a senator. Bradley should discharge his "kitchen cabinet" & employ a lawyer to advise him in his duties. He was badly advised and his action was a blunder that will not be loved by any lover of liberty in Kentucky.—Frankfort Argus.

HON. W. C. OWENS has introduced a bill in congress, two sections of which read as follows:

SECTION 1. A bill to provide for the free coining of silver dollars, equal in value to gold dollars. Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that from and after eighteen months after the passage of this act silver bullion shall be received and coined at the mint into silver dollars for the benefit of the depositor upon the same terms and conditions as gold bullion is received and coined, and such silver dollars shall be of the proportions of fineness and alloy now provided for by law for silver dollars and shall bear the devices and superscriptions now provided by law for silver dollars, and shall be of such weight to be fixed as hereinafter provided as shall make each silver dollar equal in value to a gold dollar.

SECTION 3. That the silver dollar which shall be coined under this act shall be a legal tender at their nominal value for all debts, dues, public and private, except where otherwise stipulated in the contract, and other silver dollars coined before the time hereinbefore specified for the commencement of coinage, under this act, shall continue to be legal tender as though this act had not been passed.

A warrant for the arrest of United States Marshal George W. Drake, of this city, has been issued at Salyersville, Magoffin county, charging the noted mountain detective with taking $14 in money from E. A. Bostic, of West Virginia, who was on his way from Louisville, where he served a term of six months in jail for jayhawking. Bostic charges Drake with having taken from his pocket $14 in money and some notes. He says Drake gave him back the notes, but did not return the money. The warrant was placed in the hands of the sheriff. Detective Drake has just returned from Frankfort, where he accompanied the sheriff of Leslie county, in charge of fifteen members of the famous Leslie county jayhawking band, sentenced to the penitentiary. He said that Bostic was arrested as a suspected moonshiner by himself and Will Prater, of Magoffin county, and that he had no money on his person. They could find no direct evidence, and he was released at Salyersville. Drake wrote the sheriff of Magoffin county last night for information concerning the warrant.—Lexington Leader.

ACADEMY NOTES.

J. P. Salter left for his home in Lickburg, Sunday.

Miss Nannie Bays left for her home last week. Verily, the days of some in school are few.

Several new pupils will matriculate next Monday to take special work in the teachers course.

Since last "notes" R. K. Nickell has "quit school," and Alonzo Nickell has taken his place in the debate to be held on April 8.

Miss Rosa Cannell is spending the week at her home in Magoffin county. When she returns she will bring two pupils with her.

Remember the debate for Friday evening, April 8. Question: The annexation of Canada to the United States would be beneficial to the latter.

S. M. McElroy feigned absence and was absent on the 16th inst., to be gone one week. Meanwhile, his sickness being "heart trouble," has proved fatal, and he is now on the hillsides of Morgan county, working out his future with plow and hoe. How long is his week?

Last week's Messenger has a communication from Hazel Green, casting reflections upon our academy. It has reference to the music made by the Homo band at the debate on the evening of the 13th. The writer of the communication has traveled a little farther than any one else; has seen a little more than any one else; knows a little more than any one else; can sing a little better than any one else; can speak a little better than any one else; must see, in order to believe, a little more than any one else, but evidently cannot hear as well as a "jar-fly on the end of a fence rail on a July day," and has no ear for music, as all of his kind. He would make a good news agent or reporter for a daily paper.

ACADEMIC.

Willie Pieratt, who was confined to his room at the Day House several days the past week with strong symptoms of fever, is again at his post of duty.

If new and true, fresh and clean, in THE HERALD it will be seen, and now is the time to subscribe. $1 pays for it and the Enquirer a year.

Many who are already using the flour made by the Hazel Green Mill pronounce it first-class.

Miss Lillie Evans gave us a pleasant call Wednesday.

John H. Pieratt attended court at Frenchburg several days this week.

John M. Rose and her son Charlie, who have been very sick, are now out again.

The Lexington Herald, of the 24th inst., was printed with red ink in honor of the Y. M. C. A.

Andy Nickell was called in consultation with Dr. J. H. Stanton, of Campion, in the case of Jos. Alsey's child, who is very low w/ cerebral trouble.

Some miscreant took H. F. Pieratt's horse from the stable Monday night and rode the animal so hard that it could scarcely move the next day. Entrance to the stable was effected by picking the lock. Such acts of vandalism can not be severely punished.

Last Saturday evening Mrs. F. N. Day received by express from her son Jimmie who is at Midland, Texas, a pair of fine Texan steer horns, white measure 58 inches from tip to tip. A number of other fine presents were in the box for other members of the family.

A new game called the "Ed. tor's Delight," is played this way. Take a sheet of ordinary writing paper, fold it carefully and enclose a bank note sufficiently large to pay up all arrearage and one year in advance. Keep an eye on the editor and if a mile adorns his face, the trick works like a charm. Now is the time to play the joke.

Pure blood is the sign of health. Keep the blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla if you would be well.

At a meeting of the board of trustees last Thursday night, Rollin A. Kash tendered his resignation as police judge, at no action was taken. It was all decided to ask the county court to appoint an entire new board, as no election was held at the proper time and the present members think they live to hold over.

A postal from Dr. J. A. Stanton, of Campion brings us the following batch of news: Born, to the wife of Robert Tyler, of Devil's Creek, a fine girl; to wife of John J. Tutt, two boys, weighing respectively, net, 113 and 73 pounds; to wife of Willis Collier, a boy; to wife of Adam Creech, a boy; to wife of James Reynolds, a girl; to wife of T. M. Tutt, a girl.

Sarah Fulks, of this place, is quite ill, but some better at this writing.

The young folks of Hazel Green were given a social gathering by Misses Laura Rawlins and Minnie Day on last Saturday evening. Quite a large number were present and all appeared to enjoy themselves highly. The principal amusement of the evening was "Tacking," and was participated in by all present. The refreshments served were of the most pleasurable order, and were partaken of freely by the guests. The charming hostesses received much encomium from the young people, who did not depart until late hour.

If you are troubled with sick headaches or want to reach comfort, Ramona Tonic Liver Pills will frank you through to your destination. The above reward will be paid for the return of my boy, who was kidnapped from my home, on Grassy, in March last. He was taken by his divorced father, and is now in New York, and is supposed to be there now.

He is a 6 years old post; has blue eyes, light hair, and fair complexion. There is no mark on his under lip, except on the nose, which may be the same.

John Clegg, Henry, 100 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, will be pleased to receive any information concerning this boy.
